Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, May 21—If Pacific coast sports writers have their way, Dick Bartell will be offered the first managerial job to open up out there. . . . Ray Arel, one of the best two trainers of fighters in New York, will have charge of Warren Wilson, Clemson's hard-hitting Southern Conference heavyweight champion, when he invades the ring this summer. . . . Frankie Kovacs is telling pals he's going to join the army as soon as he wins the national singles championship. . . . Good news: The Giants voluntarily tore up the contracts of Bill Jurgas, Gabby Hartnett and Ace Adams and gave them new ones calling for nice raises. . . . Bad news: Henry Armstrong starts that comeback in July.

Betting market—Opening prices have Louis 1-3 over Conn (shortest price on Joe since the second Schmeling fight) . . . Ben Hogan is 5 to 1 to win the Goodall round robin, starting tomorrow. . . . No quotatons yet on the national open.

Zeke Bonura's 439 hitting is helping Minneapolis burn up the American Association. Zeke is 20 pounds lighter and is the No. 1 guy in Millertown. . . . Milton Berle, the stage and screen comic, headed one of the Hollywood syndicates (not Bing Crosby's) which tried to buy the Boston Braves. . . . Washington papers are blasting the district boxing commissioners for not letting a local guy referee the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight Friday night. Arthur Donovan will be imported from New York. . . . Montana State's 1940 football squad has sent nine men to the National Guard, three to the regular army and two to the air corps. . . . Abe Simon's magazine piece says no Jewish fighter ever won the heavyweight crown. What was Max Baer—Irish?

Today's guest star—Lynn C. Doyle, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin: "There are 100 women in Philadelphia for every 97 men. . . . Then where do the local boxing writers get off with their essays about the shortage of sparring partners?"

John Novak, Francis Rosso and Al Chappuis, pitchers for the American International College at Springfield, Mass., have limited the opposition to one run in 52 innings this season. Nice going, fellers. . . . Marty Servo, who wears Lou Ambler's old shoes for the Al Weill fight stable, is doing a pretty fair country job of filling 'em—41 wins, two draws in 43 pro fights. . . . Cleveland scribes are passing out orchids to Gee Walker, who is sparking the Tribe in the fast pace it's setting. . . . If you know of a "name" football team which has an open date on November 8, refer it to Coach Henry Franka of Tulsa U. . . . He'll oblige.

Public notice—Phil Rizzuto wants it known he changed his front name from Fiero to Phil because the latter is more American and not because he hasn't been exactly a ball of Fiero lately.

He could win there—Carl Hubbell ought to go to court And sue the Giants for non-support.

News from back home—(From the Monroe, N. C., Journal)—"Schools have closed now, and the children will now have a chance to work." . . . Oh, yeah, and sez who?

Taneytown Horses Earn Honors at Show

Top Rail, owned and ridden by Richard Teeter, Taneytown, took the top honors at the fourth annual Carroll County Horse Show Saturday afternoon at Westminster. The horse was given first place rating in bareback riding, knock down and out, and open jumping. Springtime, owned and ridden by Virginia Teeter, Taneytown, was second in quality, conformation, manners and gaits for three-gaited horses and first in ladies' saddle class.

STUDENT CARVED

Philadelphia, May 21 (AP)—Harvey Bernstein, 15, told Prof. Henry G. Deninger that two older boys pinned him against a fence during lunch hour and cut his initials in his arm with a piece of dirty metal. Neither he nor the accused youths gave any motive for the act. Bernstein's father called in police to investigate.

Cross-Country Run In Defense Program

Harrisburg, May 21 (AP)—A gigantic cross-country run, probably on Armistice Day—Nov. 11—is planned by the Pennsylvania Inter-scholastic Athletic Association to draw attention to "health and morale" of students as a part of the nation's defense picture.

Secretary Edmund J. Wicht disclosed plans for the run today, announcing it was in the hands of C. Lawrence Walsh, of district 8, who made the proposal at a meeting of the Board of Control.

The board promptly approved the idea and may take up further details at a meeting scheduled for this Friday.

Walsh envisaged the spread of the idea to other states and said in a communication to the PIAA Board that it would "furnish a dramatic spectacle."

It has not been decided where to hold the run or the length of it though most cross-country events average from five to six miles over hill and dale.

Walsh said the proposal was "for getting across the idea of personal physical fitness" and it is "entirely possible that a national run may still be a possibility."

He recommended the competition be opened to schools which are not members of the PIAA, school assembly programs, poster contests, and other activities "to drive home the physical fitness idea."

Girl, 10, to Give Violin Program in Carnegie Hall

Charleroi, Pa., May 21 (AP)—A ten-year-old, curly haired girl in the fourth grade will have the day of her life tonight.

She is Grace Elaine Sutherland, a graceful lass who diligently has studied her violin since she was two and one-half years old.

Tonight, in the austere Carnegie Hall at Pittsburgh she is to have her very own violin program before a packed house, a reward for her perseverance.

"I just like to play, that's all," was her reply to questions as to why she has studied so hard.

Her program contains Handel's Sonata in E Major, Mozart's Concerto in A Major and six other numbers. She has memorized each one.

Flashes of Life

[By the Associated Press]

CONTEMPT OF COURT

New York—A duly-qualified Queens county judge and an assistant district attorney are prepared to make solemn affidavits it actually happened. Anyway, court procedure was interrupted when Judge Charles S. Colden was distracted by a gnawing sound. It was a small gray mouse, chewing on the sole of a newspaper reporter's shoe. The reporter was so busy he hadn't noticed. A recess was called, and the mouse was captured by two attendants.

FALSE ALARM

Los Angeles—An excited voice phoned the fire department that the Memorial Coliseum was afire with "flames leaping 100 feet in the air." Six trucks roared out—and back to their stations. The fire was atop the peristyle, the flickering flame of the Olympic torch, lighted for the 1932 Olympiad and relighted for youth preparedness week.

MAIL TROUBLE

Belleville, Ill.—Belleville's only electric traffic signal was designed to direct traffic only and—well, that's all. But when it went out of order and tied up traffic, workers opened the slotted, green-painted control box and discovered six postal cards and a letter deposited therein. They were removed and put in a mail box a few feet away and the traffic signal resumed operation unaided.

WOMAN, 65, KILLED

Chambersburg, Pa., May 21 (AP)—The charred body of Mrs. Margaret Ella Geyer, 65, was recovered Tuesday from the ruins of her fire-swept home in the Horse Valley section 15 miles northwest of this Franklin county town.

Mrs. Geyer was trapped in the one and one-half story log house when flames of undetermined origin destroyed it early Tuesday morning.

Her 81-year-old husband, John, working outside when the fire was discovered, was burned about the face and arms as he attempted to save Mrs. Geyer.

Coroner S. D. Shull issued a certificate of accidental death and said no inquest would be held.

STRIKE HITS JEANNETTE

Jeannette, Pa., May 21 (AP)—The effects of a strike in southern California's borax mines have struck here. Officials of the McKee Glass company yesterday announced the suspension of operations at one glassmaking tank at the firm's plant. The action, affecting about 100 workers, was taken to conserve supplies of borax—vital in the production of heat resisting glass.

TRAFFIC DEATH

Sharon, Pa., May 21 (AP)—With the death of Mrs. Amanda Steininger, 81, yesterday, Mercer county's 1941 traffic fatalities reached 14. She was hit by a car near her home last Thursday.

Pennsylvania Testing Ground

Harrisburg, May 21 (AP)—Pennsylvania became the testing ground for the nation today as the U.S. Army summoned 18,967 men for physical examinations under an experimental "waiting period" induction plan devised to give the Selective Service registrant "a break."

For a month the men will report to eight Army stations for final physical examinations. Those who pass will return home subject to call within ten to thirty days. Those rejected will resume their normal life.

Previously, men called from the commonwealth's 422 local draft boards went into service immediately after passing final physical tests.

Dr. William Mather Lewis, Pennsylvania director of Selective Service, said he had been informed the plan, if successful, "will be applied to the entire nation."

Waiting Period Up to 30 Days
Medical officers from Selective Service headquarters told him, the director said, that the experiment is "the most crucial step that has ever been taken in the history of selection of men for the U.S. Army."

The plan, added Lewis, was designed to give the registrant more time to adjust his affairs before entering the Army. At the beginning, the waiting period will be 10 or 12 days but will gradually broaden out to nearly 30 days. It cannot exceed that figure because the Army requires re-examination after 30 days.

Each examination station will notify state selective headquarters daily of the number of men found physically fit and local boards will then be asked to supply the number needed.

Pennsylvania for the last several months has been asked to provide quotas of men three times a month. Selective Service headquarters said, but under the new plan only one call for induction will be made each 30 days. The Army's latest call requisitioned 5,349 men—5,022 white and 327 negro—for induction between June 11 and June 20.

Eliminates Embarrassment

"The fellow who isn't physically fit for Army service will also get a break under the new arrangement," said one Selective Service official.

"Take for example the man who gets called after passing a preliminary examination. His friends throw a party, give him a razor and a tube of shaving cream and send him off to the Army."

"But he doesn't pass the Army doctor's examination and is sent home. Then he has to explain to everyone he meets on the street why he's not in service. It's all very embarrassing and sometimes he has a hard time getting his job back."

Pennsylvania was divided into eight districts instead of five, for induction of registrants under the new plan.

The new breakdown added examination stations at Scranton, Williamsport and Erie and continued those at Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre, Harrisburg, Altoona and Pittsburgh. Counties and city boards within each assigned to the eight examination stations in the new set up are: Philadelphia—Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery, Philadelphia.

Scranton—Lackawanna, Monroe, Pike, Susquehanna, Wayne.
Wilkes-Barre—Bradford, Car-

Local Concert Association Invited to Waynesboro

An offer from J. D. Benedict, president of the Waynesboro Concert association, by which members of the Gettysburg Concert association will be able to attend without extra cost the three concerts during the coming season at Waynesboro, has been accepted for the members of the local organization by their president, Edmund W. Thomas.

Mr. Benedict pointed out that the auditorium used by the association in Waynesboro is much larger than necessary for its own needs and suggested that the Gettysburg concert members use their own concert association tickets to enjoy the Waynesboro attractions.

Dates for the Waynesboro attractions for the 1941-1942 season have not been set but these artists have been engaged: Lucy Monroe, soprano; the Kraeuter trio, piano, violin and violin cello, and Randolph Hokanson, pianist.

The fact that Gettysburg association members regularly crowd Brum Chapel to capacity makes it impossible for Gettysburg to reciprocate Waynesboro's invitation, an association spokesman said.

Robert Weede, Metropolitan Opera baritone, will present the last program in the current season here Thursday evening.

Health Officer Urges Clean Up Campaign

Adams County Health Officer William I. Shields issued a health reminder to the people of Adams county today together with an appeal to countians to set aside this week to clean up spots that have been "too long neglected."

"Go over the entire house and outbuildings," Mr. Shields said, "with an eye for junk and trash that has accumulated through the winter. Much of this material, including old paper, magazines, rags and bottles, etc., will be found in the attic or down in the cellar. Get rid of all of this junk."

"A program such as I have outlined, properly carried out by local officials, the Chamber of Commerce, welfare organizations, civic and service clubs, will result not only in improved sanitation but will serve to prevent serious loss of property and possibly of life by fire."

"The campaign of cleanliness should be extended to the exterior of buildings. Wells and springs should be cleaned and tight floor covers installed to keep out foreign substances. Cesspools and outside toilets should be cleaned and lime applied. Garbage cans should be cleaned and gutters opened. Stable yards, chicken and pig pens should be given a complete scraping and overhauling before the hot weather arrives."

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

A UNIQUE VACATION

NOW that so many are thinking of their vacations I, who have had many a different one, take it upon myself to make a suggestion.

In the first place I do not like vacations at public beaches and highly advertised resorts. You do not rest or meditate at such places—though I must admit that each has its particular merit. You meet many people, and often interesting ones, and you at least get a change.

Then there are sea voyages, automobile trips to new places, never visited before, a week or so of camping; or a vacation made up of just loafing around the town in which you live, taking it easy, and dropping all responsibility and effort. Not bad, this latter, at that.

What I suggest as unique, however, is to take a map and pick out a small town—perhaps with a rather intriguing name, selecting the distance most commensurate with what you have to spend—and then buy a railroad ticket or go by car, to that place and become a visitor there for the length of your vacation.

In that small town I suggest that you walk around and talk with everyone possible. Look up the boss of the town's government and have him tell you all about things. Talk with a banker or so, many of the business men, and as many of the important folks of the town as possible. Go to the movies and on Sunday go to any one of the churches. Walk around as though you had always been a citizen in that town, and thus feel well at home.

Wander over to the railroad station and see what kind of people get off there and the kind who go away. Talk with the station master, stop a mailman or so, and get all the information you can from each about his town. Then go to your hotel, sit in the lobby and engage in talk with the man nearest you and find out what he thinks and what he does.

Take walks, and generally take it for granted that you are one of the important cogs in the town's welfare. This will help to make the town important to you. Visit the editor of the town's newspaper, if it has one. Editors are wise folks. You might even go to the picture gallery and have your face imaged! Certainly such a vacation would refresh and stimulate any man, or woman. And what institution on this earth is more important, after all, than any small town—with you in it!

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Vision."

GO FISHING

Pack a box with bread and meat,
Take your rod and line;
Leave the city's crowded street,
News of Nile and Rhine;
Turn your back on greed and hate;
Slip away from shore,
Then, as for a bite you wait,
Be yourself once more.

Hear the cardinal as he sings
Joy untouched with doubt,
Watch the gulls on easy wings
Idly soar about.
Cast your bright lure here and there
Till you feel it hit,
And where there is room to spare
Stretch your soul a bit.

Lift the anchor now and then,
Move from place to place,
Anywhere away from men
And life's furious pace.
Give yourself to all that stays
After men are gone;
Bird and bloom and tree-lined bays
And ponds to fish upon.

Fishing is a man's excuse,
Whoso'er he be,
Just to let his spirit loose,
Unrestrained and free.
Fill a box with bread and meat,
Slip away from shore,
And where all the air is sweet,
Rest yourself once more.

The Words They Used

Senator Barkley (of Kentucky, talking about lease-lend war equipment)—"It seems to be reaching Great Britain satisfactorily." * * * Of course, the situation could change completely over a week-end. Right now, however, indications are that the goods are getting across and conditions are not acute."

Charles Swan (blonde baritone) formerly with the Philadelphia Opera Company, and now in the United States Army—"I sing any place I get a chance, much to the disappointment of some of my barracks's neighbors." * * * I just like to sing * * * when I am riding or grooming my horse, or marching or sweeping the barracks."

Officers at Indiantown (when they decided to hold a soft ball tournament entirely in gas masks)—"We're going to get the men gas mask conscious if it's the last thing we do."

John G. Gaul (counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, speaking before a defense clinic)—"We must exercise sparingly any private rights which interfere with vastly superior public rights." * * * The St. Lawrence Waterway project would be uneconomical and unwise in times of peace and instead of contributing * * * it would obstruct defense."

HIMES STORY OF GEORGE FISHER M'FARLAND

Manuscript Reveals Fine Qualities of Army Officer

the first day's battle, of the nearly 500 of the regiment who had gone into battle at noon only 90 were mustered under Captain Walter L. Owens, who took over command when Colonel McFarland was wounded. The Company was reduced from 100 to 4 of the rank and file.

A few weeks later the remnant of this regiment was mustered out of service. Colonel McFarland was brought home and a soldier who had been slightly wounded was detailed to take care of him.

My father's records further state:

"During Colonel McFarland's convalescence I was with him almost daily, seeing his wounds dressed, helping to move him from his bed to his chair and back again to his bed; performing various tasks about the Academy and in return receiving aid from him in Latin and Greek. After a time I shared in the work of instruction in the school which he made some effort to revive. I gave him clerical help in the preparation of a manuscript of a book (which was never published) narrating the story of his regiment and incidentally of his Division of the Army.

Stories of Army Life

"Naturally I heard much about Army life, incidents of camp and march and features of battle that he did not usually get into print. I heard him tell the story of how a bullet clipped a button from the coat sleeve on the arm he had about his bearer's neck as he was being carried, wounded, into the Seminary building; he told of the shell that imbedded itself in the wall of the room where he was lying and filled his beard with plaster, plaster that was not all removed for weeks. There were realistic bits of the contest that somehow impressed me more with the risks of battle than pages of eloquent description.

"A letter from his Division General commending the service, steadiness and bravery of his regiment was proudly shown to me and made me realize how much the praise of his Commander means to the true soldier.

"One day, he may have been teasing me, he spoke of visiting the Army of the Potomac to consult with the officers about certain incidents in the writing of his history and said he would need an attendant. He asked whether I would go with him. I replied with an eager affirmative.

"But, if the Army should get into battle while we were there, I would expect you to pick up a gun and help to fight," he informed me.

"Well, I guess I could," was my response.

"But my parents were slow to give their consent to such a trip for their boy of fifteen, and, to my regret, it was never undertaken.

Met Many Army Leaders

"In the Colonel's Company, however, I saw in after years a considerable part of the old Army of the Potomac and many of the Army of Northern Virginia and was presented to not a few of the leaders in each."

In October, 1937, The Gettysburg Times printed an item dated McAllisterville, Pa., October 4. It was the story of the dedication of a marker placed on the site of the old Academy, which later became the first school in Pennsylvania for orphans of Union soldiers. The principal speaker of the occasion was Dr. J. H. McFarland, of Harrisburg, "a son of the late Lieutenant Colonel George P. McFarland, founder of the school and Union soldier who was wounded in the Battle of Gettysburg."

The Little Black Book
He read some excerpts from his father's diaries, which included a "little black book," that told of his experiences in the Civil War.

Dr. McFarland related that while he was attending the 50th Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, in 1913, and was standing near where his father had been wounded, a Union veteran approached to ask whether any of the McFarland family were known to be in town for the occasion. On learning he was addressing a son of the Colonel he was drawn into further conversation. Among the things the veteran spoke of was of seeing the Colonel seated on horseback, at the Battle of Gettysburg, writing in a "little black book."

How often we have reason to observe that the world is small. And how many roads cross at Gettysburg. And, be it 10 or be it 50 years after.

In subsequent issues, The Gettysburg Times will publish articles upon the late Dr. John A. Himes, whose service to Gettysburg College combined with that of his daughter, Miss Mary Hay Himes, this year, totals 75 years; an article on Colonel McFarland, his military service and his McAllisterville School; and one on the Soldiers' Orphans' home and school which was established in Gettysburg in the late 1890s.

'Round About Town

Jacob A. Small, governor of Gettysburg Lodge No. 1526 of the Loyal Order of Moose, together with the board of officers and committeemen have announced that they will join with all other units of the Moose fraternity in adopting a large class of candidates as a testimonial to the 72 students who will graduate on June 14 from the Moose City of Childhood at Mooseheart, Illinois. The class comprises 47 boys and 25 girls, all sons and daughters of deceased members of the LOOM from 25 states.

Metal GAR service markers have been placed on the graves of 1,452 Civil War veterans in Adams County. Dr. Henry Stewart reported at a recent meeting of the Sons of Union Veterans. Small American flags will be placed on each of the graves on or before Memorial Day.

Forty-five pupils and their parents from St. Francis Xavier parochial school, West High street, left early this morning on an excursion visit to New York and West Point. The excursion is sponsored by the Harrisburg diocese of the Catholic church and was in charge of Father Keller, diocesan superintendent of schools. The local party motored to Hanover where they boarded a train for New York. There they were to be taken to West Point by boat. They will return this evening.

Discussion relative to mosquito eradication in Gettysburg was included today in the official call for the special meeting of the Gettysburg borough council to be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the engine house. At the same session council will open bids for parking meters for center square and the first blocks of the four main streets and for traffic lights at designated intersections. The notices were issued today by Borough Secretary Wilmer Dracha. Only matters specifically included in the call for a special meeting may be acted upon at such a session.

A Gold Star mother in Gettysburg who was omitted from the list reported to the American Legion post here Monday evening is Mrs. J. J. Snyder, North Washington street. Three are left in and near Gettysburg since the death of Mrs. W. D. E. Scott, Sunday, The Times has been informed.

Private R. L. Dunham, of the Gettysburg detail of the state motor police, was assigned the duty of conveying with a white car 22 U. S. Army trucks that he met at the state line on Route 94 south of Hanover at 10 a. m. and escorted to Dillsburg where he was relieved by a detail from headquarters at Harrisburg. Private Dunham only recently returned to duty here after a three-month "refresher" course at Hershey.

Defense Labor Difficulties

Southern soft coal operators asserted in a national newspaper advertisement campaign today that John L. Lewis, President of UMW-CIO, would become "dictator of this country" if the bituminous industry accepted the union's new wage and working conditions contract.

Half a billion dollars worth of defense orders are at stake in San Francisco shipyards where striking CIO and AFL machinists refused today to heed the personal appeal from California's Governor Culbert L. Olson that they lay aside their grievances in the interests of patriotism.

At Lorain, Ohio, another shipyard strike came to an end when machinists were given wage increases by the American Ship Building Company.

Federal Conciliator Dewey announced at Detroit that an agreement to end a strike of the UAW-CIO against the Hudson Motor Company had been reached and would be submitted to the union late today.

Asparagus growers in California claim that a cannery strike there has already cost them $1,000,000. Here again Governor Olson's plan for a settlement was rejected by the AFL union.

Buffalo waterfront workers won increased wages after a month-long strike.

CIO employees of the Carborundum Company at Niagara Falls, which makes abrasives used in many industrial processes voted to walk out next Monday.

CIO welders at the Dunkirk plant of the American Locomotive Company agreed to resume work on a $5,000,000 order for army gun carriages.

Another jurisdictional dispute between two AFL groups came to a head last night when the executive committee of the New Bedford Textile Council announced that it was considering a general strike of 20,000 millworkers. The other party to the dispute is the Central Labor Union, a local federation which includes a number of textile units.

CONGRESS HAS NO TIME FOR SUMMER RECESS

Anti-Convooy Opposition and Taxes Are Two Reasons

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 21.—Twin objections arose today against a summer recess for Congress.

Anti-convooy senators said they would demand that their colleagues stay on the job to keep an eye on turbulent world affairs.

House tax experts declared months would be required to complete legislative action of the administration's $3,500,000,000 tax bill.

Nye Is "Against It"
Senator Nye (R.-N.D.), an outspoken opponent of intervention, said he would oppose any suggestion that Congress quit for more than three days at a time for fear of developments which might bring this country nearer to war.

"We can't afford to go away and leave the convooy issue hanging in the air," Nye said.

He said he and others hoped to obtain action later—after President Roosevelt makes his views known—on a resolution by Senator Toby (R.-N.H.) to prohibit use of the Navy to guard war shipments to belligerents.

Senator McNary of Oregon, the minority leader, also was understood to have told administration lieutenants that he could not agree to any lengthy recess.

Glass Would Use Navy
On the other hand, Senator Glass (D.-Va.) told reporters that if he had his way the convooy question would be solved quickly by employing the entire Navy, if necessary, to see that the goods were delivered to Britain.

With regard to the tax situation Chairman Doughton (D.-N.C.) of the House Ways and Means committee made one of the most optimistic house forecasts when he expressed belief that it would be "at least a month" from now before his committee finished writing the measure.

That would be near the end of June. It would require a week or more for the House to pass the legislation and then Senate committee and Senate action would have to follow. After that differences between House and Senate would have to be composed before the bill went to President Roosevelt.

"Tax Bill All Summer"

However, Senator George (D.-Ga.), acting chairman of the Senate Finance committee, said the Senate group hoped to obtain the tax measure early in June. Senator Byrnes (D.-S.C.) predicted that the Senate could recess for two months after disposing of the tax bill. But Senator Clark (D.-Mo.) forecast that "we'll have the tax bill with us all summer."

Some Indiantown Units Stick to Basic Tasks

[By the Associated Press] Indiantown Gap, Pa., May 21—The spectacular action is what grabs the public's eye, but it takes more than that to make a soldier.

Several outfits at this 28th Division training ground have broken into headlines with sudden marches, massed formations and sham battles.

On the other hand scores of units plod along each day, getting in fundamental, but less spectacular training without benefit of acclaim.

There's not a touch of difference in the training to the men or their officers. It all adds up to making the division "the best in the nation"—As Major General Edward Martin put it.

The difference is the way the particular maneuver strikes the gentlemen of the press.

Take, for instance, the 55th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Brigadier General John Aiken of Washington, Pa. It has been doing yeoman work, without getting much credit for it.

The Brigade's training this week is devoted to battalion offense and defense problems. The action is on a smaller scale than that of some of the other units and is confined to hard, grubbing exercise without the zest of an actual maneuver.

The two regiments of the Brigade—the 109th, commanded by Col. Stanley Coar, Scranton, and the 110th, commanded by Col. Albert O. King, Altoona—engaged in a typical phase of this training today.

On the offensive, the regimental battalions moved up a reservation road proceeded at some distance by an advance company. As soon as "resistance" was encountered, the company deployed and the battalions behind fanned out on both flanks.

The object was to find a soft spot in the enemy's line, a point at which he had concentrated a minimum of fire power. Finding such a theoretical hole, the battalions concentrated their attack there and poured through.

THE SACRED DAGGER

by Rita Mohler Hanson

YESTERDAY: Anne Willard has been met at a desert station by Pete Mackay, and is being flown to her father's camp. But before Pete arrived, a stranger happened by, and strangely interested Anne. And then two natives brought her a dagger, a token from her father. And now she and Pete just have rescued the white stranger, whose airplane had crashed on the wide plain. His nickname is Blaze.

Chapter Three ACCIDENT

ANNE'S companion took off his helmet. "To rest my ears," he shouted, and winked. They skillfully, now, she understood the name Mackay had called him. A white blaze streaked his dark hair above the left eye. She had heard this is a mark of peculiar inheritance passed on by mother to son or from father to daughter. Gypsies regard such people as being especially blessed.

Presently they passed over a small meadow encampment of men and horses and Anne recalled the dagger that she wore. She wondered how much this young man knew about it, if anything. As they sailed over rough country again, the air seemed to take on the nature of the landscape below. Mackay attempted to rise to escape the bumps. Suddenly, the ship's fabric started to loosen and he leveled out.

Her companion tested Anne's safety belt, hastily stuffed the cushions about her on the farther side and lifted his head against the cowl in front of them. They heard Mackay yell as he cut the engine.

A lurch, a drop, and the bottom fell out of the world.

When Anne regained consciousness, she lay wrapped in a fur robe in the shelter of the unbroken wing of the plane. The young man called Blaze was working over Mackay, washing blood from the side of his head. Anne felt faint again for a moment, and then rallied and sat up. She was working over Mackay, washing blood from the side of his head. Anne felt faint again for a moment, and then rallied and sat up.

"I've been remembering," she remarked before he could speak. "That last night you said, 'Au revoir' instead of goodbye. Was it intentional?"

He grinned. "I'd hoped to see you in Chuka. How are you feeling?" Mutely she held up the injured thumb. He frowned and took her hand in his, examined the member carefully, felt along the bones and with a sudden, unexpected jerk, pulled them into place. Anne gave a little gasp and then laughed with him. "You did that like a professional!"

"I'm a Jack of all trades," he said, sitting down crosslegged opposite her and adding, "an archer also."

"What does your father say about me?" Of course he thought you have no right to interfere in his quest for Shy-a Nago.

"I'm compelled to disagree with that," he replied gently. "You see, I heard of Shy-a Nago before he did. I was working on a way to propitiate the Nagara tribesmen when your parents stumbled upon them under particularly favorable circumstances."

"You," she interrupted, her equanimity restored, "are out of luck. This thing is like a gold rush. The first man who stakes the claims gets the concession."

"The claim is not staked yet," he reminded her. She let her hand rest on the ceremonial dagger hidden under her coat. "I carry the stake." "I know," he admitted. She had wondered. "And you can't influence father?"

"At least I can talk to him." He took a pipe from his mouth. "May I?" She nodded. Mackay came over and "dropped down beside them."

"You two know each other before?" he asked curiously. Anne said, "We've discovered that we are—natural enemies."

"How romantic," he jested. "There is, only one ending to that situation."

"This affair," said Anne drily, "is going to be different. How does it happen we are still alive?"

The men looked at each other. "I don't know," said Mackay, "unless it is the Sherwood luck. Twice in one day. Maybe there is luck in having a name so much like that of the old Buddha Shercock of Shani Lun."

He rose to appraise the damage on his plane. Anne looked up at the desolation about them, the endless ridges of gravelly sand with an occasional clump of Camelthorn, the lowering horizon, the threat of snowstorm. This was the eastern fringe of Omar Khoyam's part of the world.

"Snow upon the Desert's dusty Face," she murmured, and added forlornly, "We're not safe yet."

"She's done for," Mackay called to them, giving the fuselage of the ship a slap, and added as he returned, "Oh, well, the old bird would have been grounded years ago in any other country."

Dangerous Land

"How come you got permission from the Chinese governor to fly to Chuka?" Sherwood demanded.

"I didn't," grinned Mackay. "I thought I'd just come and then fly on to the capital and ask his nibs for a job."

"Then perhaps it's just as well for you that we did crack up. They say Chinese prisons are nasty places to die in."

"You were flying to the same place."

"I was on government business with a permit. This stunt of yours is quite different."

Mackay whistled. "Sweet serpents, is that the way you've got the new Chinese governor sized up?"

"That's the way."

"No better than the Emir of Yangsar, eh?"

"If my reckoning's right, we're inside of Yangsar territory now." Anne saw the men exchange troubled glances. She had heard unpleasant things about the independent Emir.

"Wandering nomad tribes may have seen or heard us," Mackay went on. "If they come to investigate, I only hope they listen to reason. White people are not so highly thought of in this part of the world right now."

"You can't scare me or Miss Willard."

SERMON REVERSED

Duncansville, Pa., May 21 (AP)—Pastor L. Vance Green's sermon "A Blazeless Glory" will long be remembered by his congregation at the Hicks Memorial Methodist church in this Blair county community. A bit more than 12 hours after the sermon, fire swept the church's basement yesterday. It apparently started from a defective wire.

A SLENDERIZING SHIRTWAISTER

MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN 9586

Shirtfrocks win first place in every smart woman's wardrobe. Pattern 9586 by Marian Martin is a softly tailored shirtwaister style that's young and casual, yet especially proportioned for the fuller figure (it comes in sizes up to fifty)! There's spirited novelty in those deep front yokes that are cut in one piece with the center bodice panels—a treatment that leaves the side-front bodice sections soft and becoming. The nice vertical lines of the bodice are followed through by a front skirt panel. The back skirt is smartly paneled too. You'll like the shape of the long, curved collar, whether you have it in self-fabric or contrast. And, speaking of contrast, why not try the front panels, yokes and collar all in a lighter color?

Pattern 9586 may be ordered only in women's sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4 1/4 yards 35 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

Summertime means high time to order the Marian Martin Pattern Books! It's one of the most complete, well-balanced collections of dressmaking designs available, with real inspiration from cover to cover. ANTI-FIFTH COLUMNISTS Philadelphia, May 21 (AP)—Defense problems will be discussed and efforts against fifth column activities co-ordinated by more than 700 police chiefs, sheriffs and other heads of law enforcement agencies of Pennsylvania at meetings in five cities, Philadelphia FBI Chief John F. Sears announced. The first gathering was arranged today at Allentown with others scheduled at Philadelphia, Friday; Scranton, Monday; Williamsport, Tuesday, and Harrisburg, Wednesday. Sears said the meetings were in line with FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's desire that all police departments work as a unit in establishing internal security for the American public.

Says U.S. Does Not Plan Control of Food Industry

Pittsburgh, May 21 (AP)—Assurance that there will be no government price fixing or control of the food industry as long as the Co-operative Food Administration set up by the industry continues to function, was given Pennsylvania grocers by Hector Lazo, executive vice president of the Co-operative Food Distributors of America.

Lazo, addressing the 45th convention of the State Growers Association yesterday, said the "most universal" problem in connection with the government relations at the present is whether or not there is to be a food administration for the duration of the emergency.

"Frankly speaking, we already have such a food administration," he said. "A co-operative arrangement has been worked out between the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the food producers, processors and distributors."

"We have the assurance of the highest government official that as long as this co-operative voluntary self-discipline works, there will be no government price fixing, or control."

She causes all the difficulties because she is one of those women who demand the same obedience from a husband they demand from a dog. If Michael had had the sense to bash her face in just once, everything would have been well. But Michael could not do that, because he was the sort who would fall in love with a Sarah.

REGISTRATION CONSIDERED FOR HOME DEFENSE

LaGuardia Goes to Washington to Launch Plans

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 21—A plan for the voluntary registration of the millions of men above the present military age was reported under consideration today as Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia came here to direct the vast new civilian defense program.

Counting in more than 2,000,000 World War veterans, authorities said there were approximately 10,000,000 men in the age group 36 through 45.

Furthermore, they pointed out, there were 27,000,000 women between ages of 21 and 46 from whom additional millions of volunteers could be drawn, if the registration were extended to cover them.

A final decision on adoption of the voluntary registration plan, it was said, will rest with LaGuardia to whom the President has delegated full authority for supervising the organization of civilian defenses.

Such defenses include home guards, already formed in some states, air-raid warning and air-raid defense services, and the numerous services connected with recreational and social projects for men in the army.

In announcing his selection of New York's mayor for the new post, Mr. Roosevelt indicated that civil defense services might utilize men of military age who are in deferred classifications.

Of the 16,500,000 Selective Service registrants, about 6,000,000 have been classified to date and only 600,000 of these men will be in training by the end of June. Thus a reservoir of at least 5,000,000 would be available here, and the number would be more than doubled when the remaining 10,000,000 registrants are classified.

However, some authorities are known to view this huge pool of registrants as the nation's principal manpower supply, not only for military service, if deferments should be restricted, but also for defense industries and agriculture. They argued that it would be better to draw the bulk of civilian defense personnel from volunteers above military age.

Many informed persons were of the opinion that one of the chief factors which led President Roosevelt to create the office of civilian defense was the insistence on the part of so many persons to be given something to do.

New Welding Processes Speed Defense Program

Los Angeles, May 21 (AP)—The United States is employing new welding processes for steel and aluminum to speed up its armament program, speakers at the Western Metal Congress reported today.

A new aluminum alloy will permit use of the metal for war vessels, with great savings in weight, machinery and fuel.

James P. Gill of Latrobe, Pa., chief metallurgist for the Vanadium Alloys Steel Company, said:

"Steels for defense weapons are produced faster, more efficiently and more economically than in any war the world has known."

"Defense weapons are vastly improved through recently developed welding processes which produce machines more scientifically perfect than anything ever dreamed of in the last war."

"Tomorrow's warships will involve greatly increased use of aluminum alloys," said W. H. Eisenman of Cleveland, Secretary of the American Society of Metals.

CO-OPERATIVE UNDECIDED ON MARYLAND MOVE

Governor O'Connor to Sign New Electrification Bill

conference with the power company officials will be held Thursday evening at Union Bridge.

To List Meter Readings

In 10 days customers of the Adams Electric Co-operative, Inc., of Gettysburg will receive cards on which they will record their first meter readings upon which their first electric bills—to be issued about June 5—will be based. The patrons read their own single dial meters.

C. A. Cluck, co-operative superintendent, said this morning that patrons along 34 miles of lines in this county and an equal amount in Cumberland county are receiving co-operative current now. Thursday morning another 15 miles in the Tyrone township section of Adams county will be "cut in." Several other shorter extensions probably will be energized in this county later in the week, he stated.

Line building in Adams county is expected to be finished by the middle of June, Mr. Cluck stated, and predicted that by that time the approximately 300 miles of lines in the original project in this county will have current.

Electricians are still at work wiring co-operative members' homes with about 100 properties yet to be done.

Line routes are being staked by the co-operative in York and Franklin counties while in Cumberland county nearly all of the poles are set along the 88 miles of lines included in the original Cumberland county project.

To Sign Maryland Bill

[By the Associated Press]

Annapolis, Md., May 21 — Governor O'Connor announced Tuesday he would sign the rural electrification bill designed to prevent electric power companies from constructing "spite lines" in rural territory which co-operatives propose to serve.

The controversial measure was opposed at a recent "protest hearing" by Clarence W. Miles, one of O'Connor's political advisers who represented the Maryland Utilities Association.

Veto Urged by Miles

Miles urged O'Connor to veto the proposal, asserting it was unconstitutional. Rural groups asked the governor to sign it, emphasizing that the Legislature had adopted amendments to meet opponents' objections.

The bill provides that when a co-operative files with the Public Service Commission a map indicating the area which it proposes to serve, and a verified statement that potential electric users in the area would take the service, other utilities could not construct lines, solicit customers or compete with the co-operative for a six-month period.

R-a-d-i-o Programs

New York, May 21—Now another move in radio's fight against the eight rules of the Federal Communications Commission setting up new regulations for networks and their station relations.

It originates with the CBS chain and takes the form of an analysis in 33 printed pages of "What the New Radio Rules Mean" from that network's standpoint.

Denying that the regulations comprise a "Magna Charta" for radio, the Brechre declares they are more of a "death warrant." Furthermore, it asserts that the commission's method of announcing them was "like calling a blitzkrieg a rescue party."
